

Friday June 19th

People are starting to emerge into the daylight.

It's 7am. The sky is illuminated but the sun still lies low. Moses sweeps the dirt patches with straw tied together. Gracie does some morning exercise, and Blaise stares blankly into the fire.

Yesterday, was a really good day. I needed a reminder to live light even when you are tired, stressed, or overthinking. We got to hold some adorable bunnys in the morning after Andy presented on trees which I thought was pretty impressive. Hailey decided to talk about her reptiles. That was a completely different perspective but I enjoyed seeing how excited she was. After tea, we headed to a school for the hearing impaired. The school was quite and peaceful. The kids were a bit older and more hesitant to talk.